DEACON LINCOLN'S QUESTION BOX:

Q: Why does the congregation either extend their arms or hold hands during the Mass especially during the “Our Father” and Is this Liturgical?

A. The Church has always considered holding hands as an abuse. It never was done in the early Church. It actually was in the GIRM (General Instruction of the Roman Missal) stating holding hands was not to take place, but is not stated in the current edition. Holding hands or raising your hands was imported into the Catholic Church through the Catholic Charismatic Renewal. Holding hands, (at least in the Western World), is a sign of romantic love, being in a relationship. This can become a distraction when someone is holding hands with someone other than their spouse. We need to do our best to not create a distraction for ourselves or others. Holding hands can be a “sign” showing “unity”, but at this moment, our only focus should be on praising God. Jesus taught us “The Prayer”, but He didn't say, “I want you to hold hands”. Raising hands in the “orans position”, is a posture that is a “priestly gesture” and is showing forth the victim in the sacrifice, which is Christ. That is liturgical and has a meaning. Raising your hands can be a prayer posture, but at this moment, it actually says the Priest does this posture and does not mention anyone else. Now while the Church has not come out with any direction regarding the posture of the people during the “Our Father”, They have larger items to be concerned about but it could come up in the future. Neither gesture is liturgical. I believe no one at this point is going to say anything different regarding this practice.
